Self-Evaluation/ENG160 Questions for Reflection:

Initially my feelings, I thought the English course was going to be very hard. But, it was going to get done. I was comfortable with writing because I've been writing for as long as I can remember, to where I am now. How to grade writing I don't dislike writing but I'm starting to feel more comfortable writing using what I learned from my high school and from this writing course I learned for the future as I continue in college. What I can say changed Was me drafting more of what I'm going to write in essays, Instead of going straight into it and developing more of a better format for my writing. I have done to do this was literally just doing a rough draft and like editing what I think I could have done better in for example like my analysis or making sure I'm giving background about the source so my Professor has a better understanding about the text I'm going to talk about. What aspects I feel I was strong with was Introducing my evidence, basically summarizing the text by explaining about it and then going into the quote after. I feel like what I would do better to revise my one of my essays is By analyzing the text more and connecting it more towards the real world. Convincing the reader to take my side because I'm in detail explaining how it relates to society.
